

The level of respect for one another is rapidly diminishing in today's ever evolving society. Core values are being pushed aside by today's trend to be as selfish and cut throat as necessary to obtain what you want, regardless of the consequences or harm it may bring to others. These comments are from a recently celebrated 30 year old female, who has had the opportunity to live in various cultures and societies in her life, including Spain and England. Let us respect one another as it used to be once before, let us not pry into other's lives for our own benefit and selfishness - especially when such behavior is not welcome. Please allow us to have our privacy and not to be bombarded by rude and impolite individuals calling us all hours and all days of the week, affecting our overall sense of "Peace at Home". Let's keep this country a respectful one if we can - you can do this.
